

Home Coming At Frankfort Sun.

V. F. W. Post 725 Sponsoring
Big Gathering at Frankfort
Grove Also Dance At Night

There will be a big home coming celebration Sunday, Sept. 29, at the Frankfort Grove sponsored by the V. F. W. Post No. 725 of Frankfort. There will be all kinds of amusements and games in the afternoon. Two kittenball games will be played, the first game commencing at 1 p. m. The teams participating will be Tinley Park, Frankfort and Mokena. In the evening there will be a dance. A good time is in store for all and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Hindu Monk to Be Community Center
Guest This Week

Brahmachari the Hindu monk sent over to represent the Hindu religion at the Fellowship of Faiths Conference at the World's Fair, will again be a retreat guest at the Community Center Foundation. He will speak Friday evening September 27 and Sunday afternoon September 29. On Friday evening there will also be a representative of the Mohamaden religion, an East Indian engineer. This will represent the two great religions of India in the form of a forum or debate. All are invited to attend these two meetings.

Each week end all summer the Foundation has offered a series of retreats with leading men in the different fields of religion. There have been representatives at these retreats from all parts of the country. In the coming fall and winter, there will be a series of Sunday evening programs with other leaders of social and religious thought. All people of the community are invited to attend these meetings.

The Foundation does not represent one creed or church but is open to all mankind regardless of what creed or church they may profess or attend. Church groups from all over the Chicago area have used the camp this past summer. Over 250 people a month have used the facilities of the Foundation.

Promises Old Age Pension Aid

Mokena, Ill., Sept. 24, 1935.
Editor The News-Bulletin.

Dear Sir:
Enclosed find a copy of a letter that I received from Senator Earl B. Searcy, in reply to my letter and the petition which I sent him. General Assembly.

Springfield, Illinois.
Mr. Charles L. Sylvester,
Mokena, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Sylvester:
Your recent letter with the petition signed by a lot of your good people, at hand, and I am mighty glad to have both. You may count upon it that I will help you folks at every turn of the road. What you say about the economic value of this pension is absolutely true.

I have been for it for years. Largely for the reasons you state. With cordial regards, I am Very truly yours,
EARL B. SEARCY.

ORLAND PARK WOMAN'S CLUB

(3rd Congressional District)
Mrs. Ella Loebe, public welfare chairman of the Orland Park Woman's club has arranged a tour to Hull House, Friday, October 11. Cars will leave Creer hall promptly at 9:30 a. m.

The tour will be under the personal supervision of a guide and the members and their guests have been assured of a most interesting time. A visit to the good-will industries where furniture and clothing are made over by the crippled will also be included.

A cafeteria luncheon will be served at Hull House.

Arrangements for transportation may be made through the dean, Mrs. John Schmadeke, before Oct. 10.

Start Work on Portable School

Work has been begun on the new portable school house which is to take care of the overflow of classes in the public school at New Lenox. The new building which will adjoin the main school building is 20x40 feet.

Mokena Street
Contract Awarded
Chicago Concern

The Mokena Village Board opened three bids on improving Front street with an asphalt top. The board was undecided what to do on the bids submitted and finally voted to reject the bids and re-advertise for new bids.

Village Clerk, Paul Roesener, sent a night letter to George Baker of the state highway department in Springfield asking when the state line is for laying a bituminous top and received a reply that the state dead line on this class of work is October 15.

The board called another special meeting Monday evening and the contract for the work was let to the Seneca Petroleum Co., of Chicago, the lowest bidder. The bids were as follows: Seneca Petroleum Co., 439 W. 33rd St., Chicago, 6572 square yards, $3,253.14. Walsh Oil Co., of Joliet, $3,286.00. Davidson & Doctor, Orland Park, $5,763.64.

Mr. Lee represented the Seneca Petroleum Co. at the meeting.

Work on laying the asphalt top will start this week end if weather conditions permit.

The asphalt top is to be laid 20 feet wide from Wolf Road east to the Mokena Hardware store at Division street and from that street east to the old school house corner, the street is to be 18 feet wide.

It is understood that as much local labor as possible will be employed on the job.

Soon as the job is finished the street will be opened for traffic. This street has been closed to traffic for many weeks and this has caused a hardship on all business places on Front street. First street has been used for all traffic since the closing of Front street.

A number of catch basins have been installed along Front street to take care of the storm water.

Orville Schmadeke Marries Ohio Girl

Orville Schmadeke, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schmadeke, of Orland Park, and Miss Martha McNash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard McNash of Cleveland, Ohio, were united in marriage on Saturday, September 21, at 12:30 p. m. in the Lutheran church at Lakewood, Ohio.

The groom was attended by his brother August Schmadeke of Cincinnati, and the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Clarice McNash.

Following the wedding the newlyweds went on a wedding trip and are expected back this week. They will make their home in the flat in the Zerb's building in Orland Park.

Mr. Schmadeke is engaged in the embalming and undertaking business and is also representing the International Harvester Co., in this section.

Orland Park Girl Receives Scholarship

Miss Lylas Kay of Orland Park, Illinois, through her work in the Craft Department of the Community Center Foundation received a scholarship to MacMurray College at Jacksonville, Illinois. MacMurray College was formerly known as the The Illinois Women's College and is one of the oldest women's colleges in the United States. It is rated as the finest in the west. Miss Kay was one of 18 students who received such a scholarship.

This is a part of the educational plan of the Foundation to help deserving outstanding young people of this section to attend college. Contact is being made with a number of college and Universities and it is hoped that a number of young people from this section may find it possible to gain higher education through this plan. Young people interested in this should contact Rev. Paul T. Sanders, director of the Foundation.

TINLEY OFFERS
4 DAYS OF FUN
WITH CARNIVAL

Tinley Park is preparing for one of the biggest weeks in its history by way of a four-day carnival which the Business Men's Association is sponsoring and in which all of the various organizations of the village will participate.

The big four days of fun and music will start off on Thursday, Oct. 3rd and will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The carnival grounds will be in the square near the Rock Island depot in Tinley Park. There will be seven big booths full of valuable prizes; blankets, lamps, hams, food baskets, candy, liquors, etc.

There will be fun galore for young and old. A merry-go-round and a Ferris wheel will delight young and old.

There will be something doing every minute. The famous "Hungry Five" band will be on hand and will be seen and heard every night during the carnival.

A public address system will be installed and music will be broadcast from a big dance in the Saenger hall on Saturday night.

There will be a big cash contest and prizes will also be awarded on a grain and vegetable exhibit.

The Tinley Park Volunteer Fire Department will sponsor a big Fall Festival and Carnival dance at the Saenger hall on Saturday night, Oct. 5. Good music and plenty of dancing all night.

The big carnival will climax with a mammoth street parade on Sunday, Oct. 6th in which all the organizations of Tinley Park and the Tinley Park Post of the American Legion will take part. There will be stirring music and a colorful parade starting North of Tinley Park and moving South on Oak Park avenue through the village.

Cash prizes will be awarded.

Four big days and nights crammed full of pleasure and fun for all. Be sure and come to Tinley Park on October 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th.

In addition to these attractions the business men of Tinley Park are offering a splendid line of merchandise and other stock at real money saving prices which merit your earnest attention.

Take advantage of these special Carnival days and Carnival Bargains. It will pay you to do so.

Tinley Park is ready to welcome as her guests on the days mentioned not only the residents of its immediate vicinity, but people from neighboring towns and villages and communities.

Remember next week is Carnival Week in Tinley Park, so be sure to participate in this big Fall Festival.

Tinley Woman's Club Holds Fall Meeting

With ideal weather, warm and balmy, the Tinley Park Woman's club held on Wednesday, Sept. 25, in the M. E. church, the opening program of the year. As each guest and member arrived they were greeted at the door by a receiving committee which was composed of the president, Mrs. Omar E. Ebbenhack, and Officers Mrs. C. Crist, Mrs. E. Chapman and Mrs. H. Wyman.

This was the new president's first day in the chair, and she was very gracious, and in opening made a few appropriate remarks, welcoming each guest and member, and briefly speaking of the work ahead of the club for this year.

The honored guests were introduced, who each brought greetings to the club. They were: Mrs. A. H. Sweet, third district president; Mrs. W. A. Combs, organizer of the club and Mrs. Chas. Nielsen, past president.

The meeting was then turned over to the program chairman, Mrs. Walter Bartlett, who introduced Mrs. Edgar Graves who played most beautifully, from memory, three very difficult pieces: "Lento" by Cyril Scott; "A Tarantelle" by Colridge Taylor and "Etude, in F Minor", by Donnayni. Mrs. Graves is a finished pianist and her offerings are always most welcome.

Mrs. W. B. Combs gave a report of the biennial meeting held in Detroit last June. Some of the high lights of her report were: The keynote of the convention being: "Hold fast to that which is good," emphasizing universal love and peace. There were 1,520 delegates present, from 14 different countries; 2,658 visitors and 329 Junior delegates. Illinois sent 162 delegates and 41 of these were from the 3rd district. Mrs. Combs gave a few snapshots from the address of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. Spoke of the new general president, Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, of Tulsa, Okla., who is of Indian descent.

Concluding the program, Mrs. Ebbenhack introduced the visiting presidents, Mrs. John C. McCall, of Midlothian and Mrs. Paul Sanders, of Orland Park, after which all adjourned to the dining room in the basement where, with Mrs. W. Bartlett as hostess, tea and dainty wafers were served with Mrs. Combs and Mrs. Nielsen pouring. After a short time spent in visiting, the members gathered again for a short business meeting wherein Mrs. Ebbenhack announced the following meetings: On October 16, a Club Institute will be held at Oak Forest in the M. E. church there, starting at 10 a. m., with lunch served at noon. All Tinley Park club members desiring to attend this meeting should notify the Dean, Mrs. Frank Baldwin and also meet at 9:30 a. m. Oct. 16 at Funk's store and the Drug store where transportation will be waiting. Oct. 7, from 2 to 5 o'clock the Home-wood club will hold an opening reception and flower pageant to which the Tinley club is invited.

It was decided the Tinley Park Woman's club will participate in day night at Wilton Center.

Follow your home team and see some very fine soft-ball games.

TINLEY PASTOR
RECEIVES LETTER FROM PRESIDENT

Rev. Chas. Hedler, pastor of the Tinley Park M. E. church has received the following letter from President Franklin D. Roosevelt, relative chiefly to the old age pension:

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON
September 23, 1935

Reverend and dear Sir:
Your high calling brings you into intimate daily contact not only with your own parishioners, but with people generally in your community. I am sure you see the problems of your people with wise and sympathetic understanding.

Because of the grave responsibilities of my office, I am turning to representative Clergymen for counsel and advice,—feeling confident that no group can give more accurate or unbiased views.

I am particularly anxious that the new Social Security Legislation just enacted, for which we have worked so long, providing for old age pensions, aid for crippled children and unemployment insurance, shall be carried out in keeping with the high purposes with which this law was enacted. It is also vitally important that the Works Program shall be administered to provide employment at useful work, and that our unemployed as well as the nation as a whole may derive the greatest possible benefits.

I shall deem it a favor if you will write me about conditions in your community. Tell me where you feel our government can better serve our people.

We can solve our many problems, but no one man or single group can do it,—we shall have to work together for the common end of better spiritual and material conditions for the American people.

May I have your counsel and your help? I am leaving on a short vacation but will be back in Washington in a few weeks, and I will deeply appreciate your writing to me.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Youthful Detail on This House Frock

Instead of spending an hour at the Beauty Parlor next time you feel the need of rejuvenation, try pattern 9373 and an hour at the sewing machine!—the results will be much more lasting because you'll always look young when you slip into this practical little frock with its feminine, flattering details. Scallops agree with everyone, and when accented with bright buttons they're more than agreeable. See the sketch herewith and you'll realize why we say "spend an hour at the machine!" Make it of gay printed cotton and, if you like—bind each scallop with bias tape for a gay morning frock—choose solid color shantung if you would have it for a run-about.

Pattern 9373 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—When President Roosevelt entered the White House March 4, 1933, every dollar of federal money that was expended was accounted for and the vouchers reviewed by the general accounting offices. J. Raymond McCarl, comptroller general of the United States, occupied and still occupies an independent position in the accountings he directed and the reviews that were made under the budget and accounting law. But with the arrival of the New Deal and the crisis in government and the nation arising from the depression, scores of new laws were enacted, new agencies of government were created and billions of dollars were appropriated, the bulk of it being spent without reference to the accounting act or the bureau of the budget. Congress, under White House direction, did not make these new agencies or their spending accountable to the comptroller general.

It was almost two years before President Roosevelt saw fit to make any of the emergency agencies, the alphabetical soup, amenable to the general accounting office. Consequently, millions upon millions of dollars were spent and only the spending agencies knew whether they were spent in accordance with law. Now, however, things have changed. Late last winter, the President began extending the broad wings of the general accounting office over emergency agencies and has continued to do so until, only the other day, the last of these were made responsible to the comptroller general. Thus an independent governmental unit—one with no axes to grind—again is in a position to say whether federal money is being spent as congress directed and in a manner which the taxpayers have the right to demand.

This spending of money in gigantic amounts always breeds suspicion. It causes people to inquire, whatever the form of government may be or whatever political party may be in control, whether there is waste or graft, whether the then office holders are feathering their own nests, and many another question of the like. It was true in the case of the New Deal. Observers here in Washington constantly were receiving information alleging that this individual or that had been displaying signs of unusual prosperity; that rumors were afloat concerning graft and crookedness in one agency or another and that "somebody ought to expose" the goings-on with respect to a named department of government. It was not an unusual circumstance because in every administration we have here in Washington who attempt to see and to hear as much as we can, get the same kind of reaction. Only, it seemed to have been worse this time and well it may have been because the amount of money made available to President Roosevelt and his subordinates was so much larger. It is my belief, however, that there has not been more of this intangible thing called graft in government in the present administration than in most others. There has been some crookedness because there have been court convictions of some officials but I expect when and if the future lays bare all facts concerning the present administration and its handling of the vast sums of money available to it, it will be disclosed that most of the New Deal officials have been honest in their disbursement of funds. Their friends may have profited but, if they have, that is just a repetition of an old story, a circumstance always developing in a government managed under the two party system. To the victors always go the spoils.

If Mr. Roosevelt has been able to keep down straight-out crookedness, he is to be commended. It will remove from the forthcoming campaign some of the mud slinging that really has no place in national politics. But, while the President is entitled to commendation for the attempts at honest disbursement of funds, I hear more and more criticism of the way the money has been spent. Indeed, it appears now that the vast expenditures by the administration are likely to be as much of a campaign issue as is his proposal to alter the Constitution to fit New Deal plans.

Every one knows that when an individual's pocketbook is touched, he rises in revolt. By the time the next election comes around individuals will have had their pocketbooks touched rather forcibly by national and state and local taxes of an increased amount. Thus, it is easy to see how the criticism of Roosevelt's spending is growing and can continue to grow. The government has been pushed ten or twelve billion more in debt and the end is not in sight, despite the fact that Mr. Roosevelt has intimated on several occasions lately that he proposes to curtail federal expenditures except for emergency purposes. Those announcements and any future declarations he may make are not going to soften the antagonistic feeling that people have for any public official who wastes money whether the motives be proper or improper.

From this point, one may look into the crystal of the 1936 campaign and it takes no stretch of the imagination to visualize what a pounding the New Deal opposition will give the Roosevelt administration on this question of spending.

When Mr. Roosevelt began spending, he declared it was justified because hundreds of thousands of citizens were starving. His next pronouncement on this subject by way of explaining continued expenditure was that if the government spent freely, it would serve as a priming of the economic pump; that the circulation of federal money would allow industry to sell and that industry would replace by manufacture the things sold. That, too, brought little or no result. Then we entered the current stage where the spending was to be closely supervised and only projects that held promise of actually developing manufacture and retail selling would be approved and financed by federal money. It is regrettable but it is a fact that almost nothing has come of this program.

And to make matters worse, lately, Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, and Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins have locked horns on the bulk of the projects on which federal money was to be used. It is not strange that these two men should differ. Mr. Hopkins, being a trained, a professional, welfare worker, sees things only from the standpoint of the individual who needs food. Mr. Ickes has a conception of federal spending that embraces the use of money in ways designed to start the great industries in motion. He figures that if these industries get going, they will employ workers; the workers will spend their wages and the retailers will profit thereby and, as the retailers sell from their shelves, they seek replacements from the manufacturers. The controversy between Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Ickes, therefore, is not one to be settled by compromise or by soft words. In fact, it may never be settled until one or the other gets out of his place in the government.

The importance of the Ickes-Hopkins row to the reader of this column, however, lies largely in the fact that the particular reader is a taxpayer. The connection is simply this: the last congress appropriated $4,880,000,000 for use by the administration in public works and relief. If all of that sum were spent the public debt would be increased by that amount because internal revenue taxes are insufficient to offset more than the ordinary government expenditures. Therefore, if all of this money is not spent, and it cannot be spent if the Ickes-Hopkins dispute continues to hold back administration plans, then the taxpayers will have just that much less of a government debt to meet through this payment of their taxes.

So the President's order placing all administrative agencies under the general accounting office to see that their spending is honestly done and the developments within the administration over a difference in policy must be taken together as a break for the taxpayer.

Agriculture adjustment administration officials are about ready to present to the farmers of this country a detailed plan for control of potato production. It will provide means for boosting the incomes of the potato farmers something more than 100 per cent, and will increase the cost of this item of food to consumers by a proportionate amount, of course. Conferences soon will be held between the AAA and representatives of farmers' organizations to work out phases of the plan requiring farmer approval.

Various thoughts arise if one reflects upon potato control. First, control of potato production marks the fourteenth agricultural crop brought under regimentation and it presents, probably, the toughest of all of them in the matter of enforcing its provisions.

Adoption of the potato control program represents attainment of a point in the life of the AAA where one step has led to another until control of potatoes was essential, or the whole plan of crop control flops. It will be recalled that the declared purpose of the AAA at the beginning was only for the control of cotton. Land withheld from cotton then was planted to tobacco and tobacco had to be controlled; when tobacco was controlled, and the land withdrawn, farmers in some sections turned to peanuts and peanuts had to be controlled.

I understand the AAA is considerably worried about the job of enforcing the potato control law. That law provides compulsion against overproduction in the form of a tax club—a tax of 45 cents a bushel. In addition, there are penalties of an amazingly severe kind—$1,000 fine for the first offense and imprisonment for not more than a year for the second.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

©W.N.U. By Editha L. Watson

THE HUNTER'S TREASURE

A HUNTER'S trick of shaving out small wooden spades resulted in the finding of a lost gold mine in the Breckenridge district in Colorado. But a prospector's ill luck in losing himself resulted in the losing of the mine again.

Breckenridge, as everyone knows who knows about gold, is a mining town not far from Fairplay and Alma—those rich camps where men still find abundant gold.

In the early '90s a certain hunter used to come into Denver to spend the winters. He brought skins in with him, and also rough gold in pleasant quantities. The skins, he said, were produced by his autumn hunting near Breckenridge, but he was silent about the gold.

He had a peculiar habit of shaving out small wooden spades, with which he shoveled the snow away from the doorstep of his cabin.

It was in the '90s, a good thirty years later, that a prospector rambling about in the Breckenridge district came across an old cabin, a tunnel, and a dump. On the dump were several small wooden spades, worn down almost to their handles. In the tunnel lay another spade of the same sort, which showed very few signs of use. The ore which could be seen was a black, talcy stuff.

The prospector had no receptacle except a tobacco sack. This he filled, and as he left the place he took one of the spades along. He was anxious to get into Breckenridge to see what sort of ore this might prove to be.

But on the way in he became confused. It is not hard to lose oneself in the mountains at any time. Even prospectors, whose sense of direction is remarkably keen, may get turned around. This one certainly did, but at last he got into Breckenridge all right, and there he told his story with all the proper gusto and detail. Here was the ore, too—where was that blamed sack? Must be in the other pocket—no—well, he had it when he left the mine. Must have lost it on the way. Oh well, he could go back to the place easy. But somehow he never could find it again.

If you ever go prospecting around Breckenridge, and come upon a cabin, a tunnel, and a dump, worn-down spades and black, talcy ore, try not to get confused before you get back to town. Because it may possibly turn out to be that you have discovered the hunter's treasure.

THE MINER'S PARADISE

AT TRUCHAS, north of Santa Fe, New Mexico, two Frenchmen came along some fifty years ago and found rich ore. They were great friends, and they worked gaily and energetically together, singing and joking, making light of the heavy labor.

Some time passed, and at last the partners had a sizable stake. One day they were discussing the future, which had never seemed more fair, and one of the Frenchmen said to the other, "I know what I shall do, mon ami. In St. Louis is a beautiful girl who loves me and waits for me. Why should I not go and bring her here? You would be charmed with her."

"Marvelous! We would never more be lonely," responded his friend. "Hasten, I beg of you, to go and to return."

So the happy Frenchman hurried—as much as was possible in the '80s—to fetch his sweetheart from St. Louis. She was indeed a beautiful girl, and the other man, who had a Frenchman's eye for pulchritude and a Frenchman's heart for romance, began to express his admiration in pointed terms.

Things went on peacefully until the first Frenchman began to suspect that he was being betrayed. Quarrels followed, and at last, after he had trailed the two one evening and found them embracing, he challenged his erstwhile friend to a duel with knives—a duel to the death.

Both men were young and strong—both wished to live, and both wanted the girl's affections. She, knowing that she was forgotten for the moment in the heat of the combat, quickly packed a burro with as much sacked gold as it would carry, prepared food and water for a journey, and noiselessly slipped away. After all, gold was far more important to her than their tiresome gallantries.

The duel lasted for some time, but at last both men fell to the ground, mortally wounded, and before the sun set both had expired.

About the year 1908 a man named Anderson happened to be roaming about near Truchas, and stumbled upon the evidence of the tragedy. Apparently no one had been near the mine since the girl left, for there were the two skeletons, knives in their bony hands, and there was all the paraphernalia of the mine, just as it had been left twenty-five years before.

Most Noble Order of Garter

The ribbon of the Most Noble Order of the Garter is blue, and as this is the highest and most coveted honor in the gift of the British Crown, it became the practice to give blue ribbons as first prizes.

Old Fashioned Patchwork Quilts

Patchwork Quilt Designs

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK
From all indications quilt makers will be busy this winter making more quilts. Quilts are still very attractive for needle workers, and any suggestion on this work will be welcomed.

Patchwork Quilt making is much easier today than during Colonial days. Patches are more easily obtained. Diagrams and cutouts for patches and books of instruction are printed. All of these make the work easier and more quilts are being made.

Grandmother Clark's Book No. 20 on Patchwork Quilts contains 30 quilts with cutting diagram for patches, also several ways to assemble 12 and 18-inch quilt blocks.

This book contains information and diagrams for the quilts shown above and many other old designs. Send us 15 cents for this book No. 20 and receive it by mail.

Dynamite

In Fort Myers, Fla., O. J. Hall, fifty-one, superintendent of a light and power company, placed a stick of dynamite in his mouth and lighted the fuse. It blew his head to bits.

In Estherville, Iowa, Bloom Bloom, sixty, retired farmer, placed dynamite in a rock bed, lighted a fuse and stood back. Nothing happened. Bloom waited. At last he cautiously approached the charge. As he bent over the dynamite exploded and killed him.

Shopping May Be Burden or Sport

Shopping has two aspects. One is of its tiresome element. The other is of its interesting element. It is wearisome to stand about and wait until busy salesmen have the chance to wait on you in your right turn. The walking from one store to another, and then through the shops, in search of the needed, or wanted, thing to accord with both preference and price the purse permits, the trying on of frocks, or being fitted to articles, if clothes must be bought, all these and many other of the activities of shopping are tiresome, indeed. Were it not for the pleasant reverse side of the consideration, stores would not be crowded, only dire necessity would tempt purchasers. Fortunately all shopping is not of this sort.

Window shopping is the feature that begins the pleasure, even before the shops are entered. Window dressers are paid well to arrange goods so that they will appeal to passers-by to enter. They may see what they want, or perhaps what they would like to have. These window displays are planned to lure persons into the shops, for comparatively few persons go through a store without buying something, however small. Windows, consequently, are worth looking into. It is a pleasure to do it.

If windows are fascinating, this is but the beginning of interest. Once the shops are entered, it is amazing how well and how invitingly the wares are displayed. Any woman who has gone through just one department, that carrying kitchenware for instance, will discover many articles, new ideas, or improvements of old ones, that makes her feel repaid for the exertion. The furniture department or the furniture store, the yard goods department with its handsome textiles, the dress shop, the lingerie shop, etc., each is a joy just to look at.

Shopping in large cities has both the tiresome and the pleasurable sides to the fullest degree. Shopping in smaller places is far less exhausting, and, when there are fine shops in that town or locality, then the enjoyable element prevails. As every normal person has more or less shopping to do, it is well, before starting out, to determine on one of two ways to shop. Either she should go with unseeing eyes straight to the department or shop where the wanted articles are to be found, and eliminate to the least possible degree the wearisome feature. Or she should be determined to make the trip as pleasant and as profitable as possible, with least exertion.

ADVENTURERS' CLUB

Hello, Everybody!

"Saved by Prayer"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

HERE'S the way Charles Dettinger speaks about his story: "My story is not 'Two Inches From Death,' which is the title of the story which prompted me to write this, but it is 'Too Close for Comfort.'"

I'll say it is, Charlie, and a lot of fellow adventurers will agree with me.

Charlie's grandmother is Mrs. Carrie Gray, and his pal is Le Roy Haberland, and now that the principals are introduced, we will get into Charlie's story.

One dark night back in 1929 the boys were accompanying Charlie's grandmother home from his house and had taken a short cut along the tracks. The moon was hidden behind dark clouds, and the sound of a locomotive whistling in the distance lent an eerie note to the scene.

Grandma Gray and the boys were just passing a switch when suddenly Grandma slipped and fell. Now Mrs. Gray may be a grandmother, but you see she's not so old—Charlie was only fifteen at the time—and the fall in itself seemed not so serious until the boys started to help her to her feet. When they did, their faces went the color of Grandma's name.

A Movie Serial Thriller Come to Life.

Mrs. Gray's foot had caught in the open switch!

Charlie says at first he did not realize the deadly seriousness of the accident. His grandmother's face was writhing with pain but a sprained ankle, he figured, was the worst that could be wrong, and he and Le Roy set to work to free the imprisoned foot.

But, try as they would, they could not free it. Charlie had heard of similar cases and thought that removing his grandmother's shoe would free the foot, but soon found that the ankle itself was held in the switch as though in a vise.

While the boys held on to Mrs. Gray's arms, wondering what course to pursue, a sound shattered the silence of the night and brought their hearts into their mouths in stark terror.

It was the whistle of the locomotive they had heard before, this time almost on top of them—just around the curve—and Charlie realized with horror that his grandmother was tied to the very track that held the oncoming train! Charlie says his senses left him for a moment, but then he fell to his knees and worked feverishly to release the tortured ankle. In their excitement the boys pulled from both sides, and their efforts only seemed to attach the ankle all the more firmly.

As the beams of the engine's headlight lit up the track, Mrs. Gray told the boys to leave her alone and save themselves.

"I am older than you are," she told them, "and have lived my life. If God wants me now, I am ready to go, but you must leave me."

But Charlie and Le Roy had no intention of leaving her. Instead they stood there—right on the track—holding on to both of Grandma's arms and all three prayed aloud.

Nobody thought of running up the track and trying to flag the oncoming train. Besides, Charlie knew it was the express, and never could have stopped in time.

The prayer finished, Charlie held his grandmother in his arms, while Le Roy tugged and wrenched at the ankle, which was swelling from the injury and was now held tighter than ever.

Once more the eerie whistle of the train sent their blood cold through their veins—the headlight was bright as day now, and in another second the train would come roaring around the curve.

Charlie's grandmother pushed the boys frantically away, but they would not go. She begged and pleaded but they stayed and said nothing. Charlie can't for the life of him explain now why he stayed, and he did not know what good his staying would do, but loyalty and love might have had something to do with it.

Engineer Discovers Peril Too Late.

Around the bend and into the straight track came the express. The engineer leaning out of his little window saw something on the track. His suffering as he saw a woman and two boys straight in the path of the speeding train can well be imagined.

Charlie heard the whistle shriek again, and then the brakes screamed as the startled engineer threw them full on. Passengers riding blissfully along, ignorant of the tragedy that was about to happen, must have been jolted rudely out of their seats.

But Charlie says he knew the train could never stop in time. A terrific roar sounded in his ears—the light was blinding—he gave one last despairing tug at his grandmother's arm.

Crash! The three fell in a heap in the ditch by the road! They felt the heat of the rushing locomotive as it grazed them, but grandma's foot had slipped out a split second before and they were safe!

Whew! What a close call, and what courage! Charlie says the prayer saved them. Maybe he's right.

of This Newspaper

Gibbons, with a friend—a newspaper editor—dropped in to see a movie which happened to be of the "thriller" type. "Heck," said the friend, "those things couldn't happen in real life."

Right there, Gibbons made a bet that he could find people everywhere—right in every-day life, who have had experiences that would "knock the tar" out of the thrilling adventures that are portrayed in the movies or that are born in the minds of fiction writers.

Gibbons has won his bet, hands down, and this newspaper is privileged to publish the stories with which he is proving his point.

Grapefruit Juice

a Stylish Drink

HOW it grows—the consumption of grapefruit juice in this country! Fresh factories are springing up in Florida to seal this delicious beverage in cans, and fresh addicts are buying it every day. Before the days when prohibition was revealed, ill-advised persons used to hurry off to Havana in order to partake of drinks that were not permitted here. Now that prohibition is no longer in force, well-advised persons stay here and drink such beverages as this titillating.

Havana Special: Mix the contents of a 10-ounce can grapefruit juice and one cup syrup from canned pineapple. Boil together one-fourth cup sugar and one cup water, then cool and add. Chill, add one bottle charged water and serve ice cold in punch glasses. Makes ten glasses.

Beverage for the Beau Monde

This beverage has style as well as a taste that attracts so many partakers. You can tell it by the very names of the concoctions that are made with it. Take, for instance, this:

Coffee Punch: Mix together one cup strong coffee, one cup orange juice, the juice only from two No. 2 cans grapefruit and one cup maple syrup. Chill. Just before serving, add one quart ginger ale and two cups heavy cream. The cream may be omitted, if desired. Makes a little less than three quarts.

Not only the name, which smacks of former days of fashion, but the ingredients make this a drink which moderns would call chic.

But perhaps a rickety would be even more appropriate as a summer beverage. Here's one that consists largely of grapefruit juice:

Cherry Rickey: Boil one-fourth cup sugar and one cup water, cool and add the contents of a 10-ounce can grapefruit juice, the juice only from a No. 2 can sour pitted cherries and one-fourth cup maraschino cherry juice. Chill. Add one bottle charged water and serve ice cold. Makes twelve punch glasses.

Atmosphere of the Elite

Another grapefruit combination that makes hot weather seem like a mirage is the following:

Fruit Punch: Dissolve one cup honey in two and a half cups water brought to boiling, add two and a half more cups of water, and chill. Then add one quart orange juice, one-half cup lemon juice and the contents of a No. 2 can grapefruit juice and chill thoroughly. This fills twenty-four punch glasses and carries the atmosphere associated with gorgeous frosted punch bowls with floating ice and presided over by a hostess who knows what's what.

And the following delectable drink also carries all the atmosphere of the socially elect.

Strawberry Grapefruitade: Boil four cups sugar and three cups water for five minutes. Cool. Hull two quarts strawberries, wash, crush, add one cup sugar and let stand for an hour. Then add to the cold syrup. Add the juice of twelve oranges and six lemons and the contents of two No. 2 cans of grapefruit juice. Just before serving add three quarts ginger ale, and serve over a large piece of ice in a punch bowl. Serves fifty.

Don't Be Misled

You might think that a beverage which is as swanky as all this would be expensive. Don't be misled. There is a large supply of grapefruit juice in cans, and commercial canning has done for it what it has done for many other foods formerly available only to the very rich. It has made it available to the entire public at a price that it can afford to pay.*

The Ladies Guild of the Orland M. E. church will hold their annual bazaar and supper in the church basement Thursday, October 3rd. The sale of articles in the various booths will start at 3 p. m. Supper will be served from 5 p. m. until the last one is served.

Mrs. John Loebe has returned from a visit in Kalamazoo, Michigan.

The sophomores initiated the freshmen at the Orland Park school last Friday night. The usual initiation treats and stunts were used. The freshmen boys were dressed as girls and the girls as boys. Refreshments were served.

The first pinocle party of the season will be held at Barney Moore's place October 3rd.

The improvement of Middle st., with catch basins and a new top dressing has been finished and the street is now open for traffic. This street is now one of the best in the village outside of 143rd street and Keane ave. The improvement work was done from the state gas tax funds due the village. Roy Loebe, the village engineer, supervised the job.

Mrs. Alma Keneagy of Chicago spent Tuesday with her mother, Mrs. Boge.

The friends of Robert Zerbs, son of Adolph Zerbs of Orland, were quite surprised to learn of his marriage to a Chicago girl. The marriage took place at Crown Point several months ago and was just made known recently. Mr. Zerbs is employed in Chicago. The newlyweds are living in the Harry Daniels place.

Mayor and Mrs. Wm. Kollman returned Sunday from Allison, Iowa where they attended the wedding of the daughter of the former's cousin last Thursday.

Miss Geraldine Steffen underwent an emergency appendicitis operation at the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island last Wednesday morning. She is improving nicely and is expected home this week. Her classmates in the high school presented her with a beautiful purse and wish her a speedy recovery. The purse also served as a birthday gift.

On October 1st an all day meeting of District 19 of the PTA will be held at Harvey and a number of Orland PTA members are planning to attend.

The Orland Park RNA Juveniles will meet October 2nd in Creer's hall. They will tender a farewell party to Misses Viola Jacobson and Lucille Reisch who are leaving the Juveniles to enter the Royal Neighbors. The meeting and party will be held in the evening beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

The Orland Park Camp of the Royal Neighbors will meet next Thursday night in the Creer hall. Two new members, Viola Jacobson

Mrs. J. F. Schmaderke has been visiting the past week in Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati, Ohio.

FRANKFORT

By Stanley Warning

The first Warning reunion was held Sunday in the Frankfort Grove with a quite large attendance. Some of those invited were not able to be present. It was decided to make this gathering an annual affair. A covered dish dinner was had and all present had a nice time. Those present were as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klatt, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cappel, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bettenhausen and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klatt, Jr., and daughter Florine of Joliet, Mr. Christ Warning, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Warning and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Warning and son of Chicago, Mr. Ervin Warning and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Benson and sons of Rockford, Mr. and Mrs. Jake DePorto, and sons, Mr. and Mrs. John Warning, Leonard and Donald, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Doyle and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Warning and son, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Warning and sons, Mrs. John Embeling and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Warning, Grace and Mildred and her son, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Warning, Mr. Ray Warning, Stanley and Glenn and Wendell. There were about seventeen guests missing. If they had been present the attendance mark would have reached 75 guests. Pictures were taken of the different groups and the oldest present was Mr. Fred Klatt, Sr., of Mokena and the youngest was his great-grand daughter, six months old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bettenhausen.

Twelve members of the Frankfort Community club attended the Tri-Annual meeting of the County Community club held at Lockport on Tuesday. Mrs. Henry Breidert received a prize on her zinnias.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Genens, daughters Vera and Elrita and son Donald of Dyer, Ind., visited on Sunday with the former's parents Mr. and Mrs. Charles Genens Sr.

Mrs. Martin Koenecke spent several days in Peotone last week with her father and sister, also her father-in-law Mr. Henry Koenecke, returning to her home here on Friday evening.

The R. N. A. Camp 6063 will hold their regular meeting next Thursday evening, Oct. 3rd at the Frankfort hall.

The Ladies' Aid of the M. E. church will hold their meeting on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 3rd in the church parlors. They are also giving a chicken supper on Oct. 18, in the church dining room.

On Friday afternoon a new car drove up at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Genens Sr., and three gypsy ladies got out and went into the home, begging for something from Mr. Genens and by that time Mrs. Genens came in from her garden and told them to get out. It seems too bad that people have to put up with such begging and stealing. The gypsies had a new car.

MOKENA

The Mokena Royal Neighbors will meet at the Mokena Public school Auditorium Tuesday October 1 at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Daly the Will County Deputy will be present. All members are requested to attend.

Mr. Joe Kolber of Chicago, visited Tuesday with Mrs. Anna Kolber. Mr. Kolber is in very poor health.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wachter and Mr. and Mrs. Pete Chamberlain were dinner guests Sunday in the home of Mrs. Mary Wergen in Lockport.

Mrs. L. G. Bruder, daughter Katherine and cousin, Mrs. Eisner of Chicago enjoyed a motor trip last week end through the northern part of Michigan. Miss Bruder will complete this week her two week's vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Willett and son who have been boarding in the Ed. Schmidt home, have moved into the Chas. Hacker house. Mr. Willett is a telegraph operator in the local Rock Island depot.

Howard Spiess and his room mate, Terry Hallbom, both employed in the Donnelly's Printing Co., in Chicago, left Wednesday by motor to spend a three-week vacation touring the western states and attending the San Diego fair.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Yunker, daughter Marie, and Mrs. F. Baumgartner motored to West Bend, Wisconsin over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Spiess and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Creer were guests Sunday in the home of Mrs. Spiess' uncle, John Marti, near Plainfield. The 70th birthday of Mr. Marti was celebrated and also the birthday of Mrs. Spiess. Fourteen guests were present.

Mrs. Agnes Haley of Marley and Mr. Tabor of Chicago who is here tuning the pianos in St. John church, were guests Monday of Mrs. Florence Demkow on Front street.

Mrs. Amanda Lorenz had the misfortune to step on a needle which ran into her foot. It was necessary to have a physician remove it.

Mrs. L. G. Bruder, president of the Joliet group of the Methodist Woman's Association, recently called a board meeting, which was held in the home of Mrs. Bayard Scotland in Joliet for the purpose to plan the program for the fall meeting. This meeting will be held in the Grace M. E. church in Joliet on October 9.

Those present at the board meeting were: Mrs. Bruder, Mrs. Sylvester Gross, Mrs. Otto Hills, Mrs. Wm. Kelly, Mrs. Benjamin Wright and Mrs. Scotland.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Benson and children of Rockford, Ill., spent the week-end with their parents in Mokena.

Mr. B. Anthony, former Rock Island section foreman in Mokena, now at Atkins, Ill., spent Sunday in the Anton Benson home.

Mrs. Anton Benson, son Gordon and grandson Kenneth, who tagged in Mokena Saturday for the Swedish Orphan's Home in Joliet, received $10.63 for their efforts and desire to thank all who so kindly helped with their contributions.

Mokena School Notes

Marvin Kohl is absent because of an infection in his leg.

The intermediate room is very attractive with posters of baskets of fruit and drawings made by the geography classes.

The intermediate grades are hard at work trying to master division problems in Arithmetic.

The children are all enjoying riding their bicycles.

Last Monday all the pupils had their picture taken.

Constitution Day was observed last Monday in the High School. Each pupils gave a statement concerning the Constitution. So that nothing was missed Jeanette Cooper and Roy Kohl made complete reports.

Blenda Monson and William Abbe were on the absent list a few days this week.

The members of the sophomore class are making notebooks for geometry.

Special

Joe Lawrence has written about some of the things that he found out during our short visit to the print shop. Here is the article he has submitted:

Inside of a newspaper establishment many things go on that are not known by the general public. Here are some of the important things about printing. For printing matter all type must be set by hand. The cuts are called stereotypes and electrotypes. Mr. Semmler started with a hand press, but now has larger presses.

The linotype machine costs about $5000 when new. It melts lead in a lead in a receptacle by means of receptacle by means of gas heat.

The metal is made into slugs with letters on them. Each slug makes a line of print in a newspaper column. Keys are pressed like those of a typewriter which are to be the letters on the slugs, by the operator of the machine. If a mistake is made a whole line, or one slug has to be done over.

There is no waste of metal, the old slugs are trimmed, cncfwnfwp p aid slugs and trimmings are used again. After a slug is made the bottom and edges are trimmed with a knife in the machine.

The ads to be printed are sent by persons who also send a cut. The orders are filled and if the person does not send for the cut before 90 days the metal is ripped off the block and sent in to be melted and made into another cut.

After the paper has been printed the type used for the printing must be distributed by hand in type cases, each letter belongs in a certain place.

The paper which is to be printed has to be cut to a certain size. This is done on a paper cutter which can cut 500 sheets at once.

For fastening a book together a stitcher is used. This is a machine that places staples in the paper.

TINLEY PARK

Tinley Park's group of five fishermen have returned from a week's vacation spent in fishing in Wisconsin, and now they are taking off this week to rest up from the strenuous activities of their vacation. But they say the good time they enjoyed was well worth it.

Dr. Carl E. Schultz has moved his dental equipment from his Chicago office to Tinley Park and is prepared to do expert dental work. Dr. Schultz reports a nice pickup in business. Mrs. Louis Goessel returned Monday from Barron Lake, Michigan, where she spent the summer.

Raymond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bettenhausen, while playing fell and broke his left arm. Dr. Carmichael set the broken bone.

The Rock River conference of the M. E. church will be held in Elgin next week. Rev. C. H. Hedler of the Tinley Park church will attend this conference and there will be no church services in his two churches on October 6th.

Guests of Rev. and Mrs. Chas. Hedler the past week have been as follows: Their son Harold E. Hedler of Newaygo, Michigan, who spent last Friday and Saturday with them. Mr. and Mrs. C. Edwards, of Aurora; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schwermer and son; Mr. and Mrs. Froehke and son, Mrs. Brose, Mr. and Mrs. Fabian, all of Michigan City, Ind., were guests at the parsonage Tuesday.

Postmaster Paul Rauhoff has been attending the National Postmaster's convention in Chicago this week.

The H. and M. Pinochle club was entertained in the home of Mrs. Elmer Stelter Thursday.

Mrs. Elmer Stelter entertained a group of relatives and friends at dinner Monday in celebration of her birthday.

The Busy Bee Sewing Circle gave a kitchen shower in honor of Ruth Andres at the home of Mrs. Mabee, Sept. 23. Various games were played and ice cream and cake and coffee were served.

at 3 o'clock in the M. E. church. The Tinley Park Garden club wishes to thank every person who so generously donated their flowers and jellies this season to be distributed to the hospitals, institutions and homes, through the Chicago Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild.

Flowers were sent several times during the season. Wednesday, Sept. 25, a box containing large jars of jellies and jams and a large box of flowers were sent by the chairman and her co-workers, Mrs. R. J. Hug and Mrs. F. Goebel. Those who donated jellies and flowers this season were Mrs. R. J. Hug, Mrs. J. E. Swisher, Mrs. Hildene Anderson, Mrs. Wm. Funk, Mrs. John Funk, Mrs. John Klepper, Mrs. Marquardt, Mrs. Geo. Hartman, Mrs. John Werth, Mrs. Al. Koehler, Mrs. John Boyer, Mrs. Wm. Schellhase, Mrs. Forrest Rice, Mrs. Glogwitz, Mr. G. Schreiber, Mrs. Mesenbrink, Mrs. Harry Mager, Mrs. Frank Baldwin, Mrs. Fred Goebel, Mrs. Henry Wyman, Mrs. S. Oetgen, Mrs. E. Kehr, Mrs. Leroy LeLonde, Mrs. H. Berg, Mrs. A. Rauhoff, Mrs. R. J. Ryan, Mrs. W. Clemens, Mrs. Jas. Fulton, Mrs. Henry Bettenhausen, Mrs. J. Mausen, Mrs. Frank Mancke, Mrs. Ed. Henke and Mrs. H. Brueggeman and other school children who did not have their names on the bouquets donated by them.

We wish to extend our thanks to Mr. A. Kososki and Mr. Mager who so willingly cared for the flowers at the Rock Island depot, and to each one who helped to make some one happy, by sharing their flowers. If I have mised anyone, it was not intentional and we will be glad to add your name to this list next week.

MRS. E. E. ANDERSON, Guild chairman.

T. Y. O. TATTTLER

Hello folks!

Here we are again with more news and what news!

Don't forget the big kittenball game at Frankfort Sunday afternoon September 29. It is a three team tournament between Frankfort, Mokena and Tinley.

Plans are a foot for a treasure hunt to be held in the near future. So all you boys and girls get set for a real night of fun.

This little incident took place one night last week in a near by town where two young lads were attending a party. At the close of the evening's entertainment, one of the lads stepped out into the car with a fair companion. Seemingly, unnoticed, he awaited the coming of the other couple. But, he did not notice several pair of eyes watching he and his companion from a passing car, for he seemed to have eyes only for his companion. Who were these two young people? Would't you like to know? Maybe you will hear next week.

It appears as though the Milkman sees a lot in the Milkmaid and versa vice. Am I right or wrong?

Cheerio!

Dividend Printing

There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.

The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

We are equipped to give you that kind of printing. Let us prove it to you.

A FRUIT FOR

pretty Lips

AMY in Charles Dickens' "Little Dorrit" was commanded by Mrs. General to say "papa, potatoes, poultry, prunes and prism," especially prunes and prism because that "gives a pretty form to the lips." Fortunately we have learned better than that, and no longer command our little lasses to use these words for that particular reason, but we have discovered other reasons why prunes, at least, are a very good thing for them to eat, or else drink in the form of prune juice.

Prevent Lip Pallor

Prunes, according to the Oregon State College Extension Service, are a wholesome, nutritious, economical food, because they supply energy, are a good source of iron, contain other necessary minerals, contain vitamins, are a mild laxative, supplement the milk diet of infants and are a desirable food for all children. Modern children are no longer urged to pronounce the word in order to pucker up their pretty lips, but they are urged to eat the fruit because it helps to prevent pallor of the lips whether puckered or not.

Now Widely Available

Both prunes and prune juice are available in cans. The prune juice, perhaps, is not so widely distributed as the fruit itself, but you can make delectable drinks, too, with the juice contained in the canned fruit. Here, for instance, is the way to make an excellent

Prune Punch: Mix together the juice only from a No. 3 can fresh prunes, one-fourth cup lime juice and two cups water. Pour over ice and serve in punch glasses. Makes ten glasses.

Appoint Will Co.,
School Nurse

Miss Margaret Moffett has been appointed as the Will County School Nurse. By unanimous vote of the Board, she has been made a part of the office force. There is no longer a battle between this office and the County Nursing Service; therefore, County Supt. of Schools Booth expects the teachers of the County to admit Miss Moffett into their classrooms, and to co-operate with her in the performance of the service for which she is being paid. Under the circumstances he is positive that no school board will object to this plan; but if any do, he trusts that the teachers will simply refer them to him.

The WHY Of GOOD COFFEE

WHAT is the one essential beverage which makes or breaks the average American's day? Coffee, of course! We spend, as a nation, $300,000,000 a year for this delectable beverage, and yet a good many of us continue to grumble because we sometimes get coffee that does not taste right. There's a reason for this. The only coffee that makes a good brew is strictly fresh, and the only coffee that keeps strictly fresh until opened is that which is packed in vacuum cans.

There's a reason for this, too. When the coffee bean is roasted, a gas, called carbon dioxide, is found in its tiny cells. This gas is under such high pressure in the coffee bean that it forces its way out very rapidly for the first twenty-four hours after the coffee is roasted and ground. In about nine days practically all of it has left the coffee.

More Reasons Why

The roasted bean also develops an aromatic or volatile oil which contains the aroma or flavor of the coffee and forms that part of it which is so delicious in the cup. This aromatic oil evaporates from the ground coffee along with the gas.

The oxygen of the air is the great enemy of good coffee because its reaction with substances in the coffee develops a disagreeable flavor which makes us call it stale. It is to preserve the flavor and oils of coffee and to exclude the oxygen that it should be packed in vacuum cans.

Coffee, so packed, is sealed in the can in a large machine called a vacuum closing machine which draws out the air and seals the cover so that no air can possibly get in, all this in one operation.

The senate department of finance allotted $987,639.55 to counties of the state from the motor fuel tax paid in August. Director K. L. Ames, Jr., announced. Of the total $202,700 was held in reserve by the state for interest and retirement of the $20,000,000 emergency relief bond issue and $41,590 for interest and retirement of the $30,000,000 relief bond issue.

Chief Justice Walter J. La Buy of the Circuit court in Chicago held unconstitutional a recently enacted state law to waive penalties on delinquent real estate taxes and to permit payment in seven annual installments. Judge La Buy said that such legislation would discriminate against persons who already have paid their taxes and penalties in full, would aggravate delays in tax collections and would injure the public credit.

Funeral services for Charles A. Gifford, seventy years old, member of a pioneer Cook county family, were held in the First Baptist church of Elgin, with burial in the Bluff City cemetery. Mr. Gifford died on the old family homestead in Hanover township, on the western edge of Cook county, where he was born. His father, Abel Gifford, settled there in 1836. He died September 17, 1895. James T. and Hezekiah Gifford, brothers of the elder Gifford, helped to found the city of Elgin.

An Illinois recreational program, designed to give "security" wages to skilled workers and to meet the problems arising from increased leisure time, was announced by Robert J. Dunham, state director for the Federal Works Progress administration. The program will be directed by Walter Roy, who is in charge of professional and skilled WPA projects. It is to be co-ordinated with similar activities of the National Youth administration, NYA, whose Illinois director is William J. Campbell, already has sketched plans for leisure time activities of young men and women between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five years. Through the use of already existing organizations and institutions, whose utility has been curtailed by lack of funds, and the establishment of recreational institutions in communities where they are entirely lacking, the WPA plans to employ skilled leaders to direct a program of athletics, singing, dramatics, and other community activities. Pageants, carnivals, patriotic celebrations, woodcraft, toy repairing, weaving, model boat and airplane building, and a variety of other arts and crafts are to be taught.

All Illinois towns were warned to be on the lookout for an insane convict and three life term murderers. They escaped from the southern Illinois penitentiary at Menard. It was believed the fugitives, all trustees, were headed toward Chicago.

Ferdinand Waggoner of Springfield, who lived 43 years with an artificial stomach of silver tubes, died at the age of one hundred and three years. Waggoner, a florist during his active life, was accidentally shot in the back by a friend during the Chicago fire in 1871. The wound necessitated removal of his stomach about 20 years later.

THE MERRY LITTLE BREEZES
HELP LIGHTFOOT

COULD you have seen the hunter with the terrible gun and Lightfoot the Deer that morning on which the hunting season opened you might have thought that Lightfoot was hunting the hunter instead of the hunter hunting Lightfoot. You see, Lightfoot was behind the hunter so as to keep track of him. As long as he knew just where the hunter was he felt reasonably safe.

The Merry Little Breezes are the best friends that Lightfoot has. They always bring to him all the different scents they find as they wander through the Green Forest. And Lightfoot's delicate nose is so wonderful that he can take these scents, even though they be very faint, and tell just who or what has made them. So, though he makes the best possible use of his big ears and his beautiful eyes, he trusts more to his nose to warn him of danger. For this reason during the hunting season when he moves about he moves in the direction from which the Merry Little Breezes may be blowing. He knows that they will bring to him warning of any danger which may lie in that direction.

Now the hunter with the terrible gun who was looking for Lightfoot knew all this, for he was wise in the ways of Lightfoot and of the other little people of the Green Forest. When he had entered the Green Forest that morning he had first of all made sure of the direction from which the Merry Little Breezes were coming. Then he had begun to hunt in that direction, knowing that his scent would be carried behind him. It is more than likely that he would have reached the hiding place of Lightfoot the Deer before the latter would have known that he was in the Green Forest had it not been for Sammy Jay's warning.

When he reached the tangle of fallen trees behind which Lightfoot had been hiding he worked around it slowly and with the greatest care, holding his terrible gun ready for use instantly should Lightfoot leap out. Presently he found Lightfoot's footprints in the soft ground and studying them he knew that Lightfoot had known of his coming.

"It was that confounded Jay," muttered the hunter. "Lightfoot heard him and knew what it meant. I know what he has done. He has circled round so as to get behind me and get my scent. It is a clever trick, a very clever trick, but two can play at that game. I'll just try that little trick myself."

So the hunter in his turn made a wide circle back and presently there was none of the dreaded man-smell among the scents which the Merry Little Breezes brought to Lightfoot. Lightfoot had lost track of the hunter.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have lost all my money and am broke. A fortune teller told me that when the soles of my shoes wear out, I will be on my feet again. Do you believe it?

Yours truly,
CLAIRE VOYANT.

Answer: Well, I have to.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Can you tell me how it is that so many men are bald headed?

Yours truly,
DAN DRUFF.

Answer: Men lose half their hair worrying if their sweetheart will marry them. After they are married they pull out the other half worrying how to get a divorce.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I see where they were recently playing Hamlet in evening clothes. I am trying to modernize Uncle Tom's Cabin. Can you offer any suggestions?

Truly yours,
I. NOEL OTT.

Answer: When the bloodhounds chase Eliza, have her do the Charleston on each cake of ice.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I owned a horse but had no hay for the horse to eat. I met a man who had a load of hay and I traded him the horse for the hay. Now I have no horse to eat the hay. What can I do?

ANN VILL.

Answer: Find the man you traded with and ask him if he'd be kind enough to lend you the horse to eat the hay.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

There is a man living next door to me who is very lazy. In fact he lets his wife support him by taking in washing. Shouldn't he be ashamed to let his wife support him in that way?

Sincerely,
ALEC. TRICKIRON.

Answer: I wouldn't blame the husband so much, if I were you. Maybe his wife is ignorant and can't earn a living any other way.

MOTHER'S
COOK BOOK

SECRET OF CUSTARDS

CUSTARDS are such good desserts for children and the aged as well as for those who have weakened digestion. The secret of a good custard is in the cooking.

Steamed Cup Custard.

Beat two eggs lightly until the whites and yolks are well mixed, add three tablespoons of sugar, a bit of salt and a generous grating of nutmeg. When the sugar is well dissolved add a pint of good milk, stir and mix well and pour into three custard cups if large—four if small. Set in a pan of hot water and put on to steam. Do not let the water stand too deep in the pan so that in boiling it will roll into the cups. Watch carefully after the boiling begins; test with a clean knife thrust down the center of the custard. When the knife comes out clean remove the cups at once from the hot water and chill before serving. For variety in flavor—melt a few tablespoons of sugar in a smooth frying pan and pour this caramel into the bottom of the cups before adding the custard. When cooked they may be turned out and the caramel will form a brown sauce over the custard.

Meringue of Rice.

Put a cup of rice to cook in a pint of boiling water. When the water has evaporated add a pint of milk, a tablespoon of butter, the grated rind of a lemon and four well-beaten egg yolks. Butter a pudding dish and pour in the mixture, adding a little salt. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff, add a tablespoon of lemon juice and half a cup of sugar. Spread over the pudding and bake until brown.

Puffed Rice Pralines.

Heat until crisp three cups of puffed rice, stirring often to keep from scorching. Boil two cups of brown sugar with one-half cup of water, one tablespoon of vinegar, one tablespoon of butter, until the mixture makes a soft ball in cold water. Add a pinch of soda and salt and add the rice. Pour into pans well buttered and allow to harden.

Water Plants as Food

The pond lily has tuberous underground stems several feet in length which are rich in starch. In fact, the moose, largest of all North American mammals, is known to feed on these stems of the pond lily and other aquatic plants. The cattail and swamp grasses also have stems and roots of sufficient size to serve as food for an elephant. Here then was the food for this extinct race of curious beasts, which ranged across the deserts of Asia and North America.

ON LABOR DAY

By ANNE CAMPBELL

ONE never knows the satisfying taste Of bread until he earns it... Better still

To plow the stubborn earth, to plant the waste And carry the threshed wheat down to the mill. Bread that one gains by sweat is better than The proffered loaf... The gift of luxury Will never sing into the heart of man As will his triumph over poverty.

Once the soiled hands of Labor were not held In high repute, but now our daily prayer

Is not for gifts of bread... Our pleas have welled From weary hearts that have too much to bear.

But with new courage for the bitter morn, We pray to earn our bread by honest toil.

SYNOPSIS

To the little town of Heron River comes Anna ("Silver") Grenoble, daughter of "Gentleman Jim," formerly of the community, known as a gambler, news of whose murder in Chicago has reached the town. Sophronia Willard, Jim Grenoble's sister, is at the depot to meet Silver. Her household consists of her husband, and stepsons, Roderick and Jason. The Willards own only half of the farm, the other half being Anna Grenoble's. On Silver's arrival Duke Melbank, shiftless youth, makes himself obnoxious. Roderick is on the eve of marriage to Corinne Meader. Silver declares her eagerness to live on the farm, and will not sell her portion. She meets Roddy, Silver tells Sophronia ("Phronie," by request) something—but by no means all—of her relations with Gerald Lucas, gambler friend of her father. Roddy marries Corinne. She has a maid, Paula, who seems to attract Jason. Silver again meets Gerald Lucas, who has established a gambling resort. She is compelled to introduce him to Corinne Willard much against her will. Silver confides to Roddy the fact of her illicit relations with Lucas. Friendship between Lucas and Corinne develops. At a dance Duke Melbank insults Silver. Roddy's solicitude brings Silver to the realization that she loves him. Roddy is offered a position at the University farm, but, to Corinne's dismay, he declines it. Determined to break up the over-friendliness of Lucas and Corinne, Silver tells Roddy she has decided to sell her portion of the farm. Not understanding, he reproaches her for her "treachery."

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

She sprang up suddenly. "Have you gone crazy?" she cried huskily. "Do you want me to bring a child into a place like this—where we may be starving next year? Or wasn't it enough for you to throw Anthony's offer into my face? You had to think up something more brutal—" "Corinne—for God's sake!" Roddy stammered in despair. "We are not going to starve," he went on lamely, obstinately. "Lots of people are bringing up children on less than we have." It dawned on him painfully that Corinne was not listening. He felt completely lost, floundering about in a gray and chilling chaos. "All right, Corinne," he concluded dully. "I did not know that I was insulting you. I'll not do it again." He got to his feet and turned to find her eyes upon him, widening for a moment with reflective indolence, then closing as though she was shutting him out of her consciousness, shutting herself in with her own resignation and defeat.

On an evening in February, Paula had come down from the big house and sat beside the table munching an apple.

Sophronia pushed her glasses back into place on the bridge of her nose and shook her head.

"There's no use in you gettin' yourself worked up into a state over Corinne," she said to Paula. "If you ask me—all that woman needs is exercise. If she'd do a bit of her own housework, it'd be better for her."

"I don't know," Paula ventured. "She doesn't seem right. She took one of them headaches again today. Sometimes she scares me. She stares at the walls and says the wind is drivin' her crazy."

"I think I'll go up and stay with Corinne for a while," Silver said.

"That's better," old Roderick said. "It's the first time anybody here has been in Roddy's house in almost a week."

Silver felt the rebuke in the old man's words. Almost a fortnight had passed since she herself had been in Roddy's house. The intense cold had been reason enough for staying indoors most of the time.

"I think I'll go along with you," Paula said hesitatingly.

"Let's go, then," Silver said.

Corinne was huddled up in bed weeping stormily.

"Corinne!" Silver said sharply. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself!"

Corinne stared at her with wild eyes. "Who sent you here?" she demanded petulantly. "I suppose the whole Willard family has been having a convulsion!"

"Stop it!" Silver broke in. "No one sent me—and you're acting like a child."

Corinne began to weep in earnest. "I—I might have known—you'd say that. This place is driving me mad! The wind—and the cold—and being alone—"

"You don't have to be alone," Silver protested. "Why didn't you come down with Paula tonight and—"

"Because they all hate me! I know it. They hate me because I'm not a farm lout—like the rest of them. Roddy hates me—and loves to see me suffer! He's tickled to death because Jason has humiliated me. Paula for a sister-in-law—oh!"

Silver took her by the shoulder. "I'm not going to sit here and listen to that nonsense," she said severely. "You've got to get yourself out of this mood."

Turn over here! Is your head aching?"

"It has been bursting—all day!" Silver ran her fingers gently over Corinne's shoulders. "I used to do this for my father when he had a headache," she said quietly, and began pressing her finger tips into the tendons and muscles that were knotted at the back of Corinne's neck.

Corinne turned over on her face and moaned. But Silver continued to ply her fingers until Corinne began to relax at last, and her muffled wailing ceased.

"That's better!" Silver said.

"O-oh—that hurts!" Silver worked more gently. "You ought to get out and see what the world is like around you. I'll tell you—take a walk with me early tomorrow morning, over to the Flathe place and back. You have no idea how good it makes you feel."

A sort of docility had crept over Corinne. "I'll do anything," she murmured, "just to get away from the grayness of this hill."

For some time there was silence between them, until Silver began to wonder if Corinne had fallen asleep. Presently, however, Corinne spoke up unexpectedly.

"Why didn't you marry Gerald Lucas, Silver, when you had the chance?"

"I should have been the most unhappy creature in the world," Silver replied.

"Why?"

"Because—I've seen enough of that life to know," Silver said.

Corinne lay still and did not speak. Fear filled Silver's heart as she fixed her eyes upon Corinne and wondered, with something like despair, what was passing in the mind of this girl who was Roddy Willard's wife. Once or twice she felt that she must say something to warn her against Gerald Lucas and the bright disaster that awaited any woman who gave him her love. But the words would not come. At last, with an inner trembling, she got up and spoke softly.

"I hope you feel better."

Corinne turned over and yawned. "Lots better. Thanks so much, Silver."

She patted the coverlet on Corinne's shoulder. "Try to sleep now. And I'll come up in the morning, right after breakfast, to take you on our hike."

"Perhaps it would be better to postpone it till the afternoon—or maybe another day," Corinne suggested. "I'm expecting a telephone call tomorrow."

Silver regarded her for a moment in silence. "Well, go to sleep now, anyhow," she said, and stole quietly out of the room.

Alone again under the cold starlight, Silver found that her ministering to Roddy's wife had had a profound

"But, Lord! How Am I Going to Explain It to the Folks?"

effect upon herself. All that lawless feeling for Roddy that had battled within her for weeks retreated now before a burning pity for Corinne and a feverish resolve to do everything in her power to save Roddy's wife from herself and her false sense of values.

CHAPTER IX

In March, after a prolonged spell of bitter cold and very little snow, a sudden thaw set in. The back of the winter, as Sophronia said, was broken. But everywhere the talk was of the gloomy outlook for the farmer. "A man doesn't know whether to pray for rain or drouth. If there's a bumper crop, prices will go still lower—and if you don't plant at all, you get nothing."

Roddy reflected. What if he had to sell his last year's grain at practically no profit to himself! He was no worse off than countless farmers whose obligations were staggering compared with his own. He could still give Corinne enough money to buy herself some spring clothes, though she probably would never know how much it meant to him. Well, perhaps things would be better now that spring was here.

For that matter, things were better. Corinne had been more like her old self during the past weeks. He was well aware that Silver Grenoble had had much to do with the change in Corinne's state of mind. He had seen very little of Silver, but she and Corinne had become very friendly.

He slowed down as he saw a horse and rider. It was Silver Grenoble. "Where do you think you're going all by yourself?" he laughed.

"If you really must know," she replied, "I'm going down to get some dogweed near the lake."

"Where's Corinne? You two—"

"She wasn't home when I called. We hadn't planned anything for today."

"Why don't you come up to the house some evening when I'm around. Gosh, I haven't seen anything of you since Christmas!"

"I've been busy," Silver retorted simply.

Roddy smiled. "Busy giving lessons in good cheer to my adorable wife, eh? Well, you've made a good job of it."

The sudden flags of color flew in Silver's cheeks, and Roddy suffered an acute pang of dismay.

"Run along and get your dogweed, then," he said hurriedly, and started his car.

As he continued on his way, Roddy found that he could not dismiss from his mind that swift, baffling blush his sally had won from her. Her face had had the delicate, flushed courage of a spring flower. She was not of the land in the same sense that Paula Gobel was. Paula was like a field of ripe wheat. But Silver Grenoble had an earthy quality all her own; she was like young grass in a pale spring sun, or sheet lightning in a summer dusk, or the shadow of a bird's wing over water. Roddy was glad that he could regard her so disinterestedly now, for her own fine values.

In a dappled enclosure of birches where new leaves were like a sunny green rain, Corinne Willard leaned against a tree. Gerald Lucas was looking down at her with a contemplative, a masterful smile, that thrilled and frightened her, and made her feel at the same time triumphant.

"Haven't we been playing tag long enough, darling?" he asked softly.

"Why don't you admit that I love you?"

Corinne laughed throatily. "What a sweet new way you have of putting it, Jerry," she said, and lifting her hand she ran her fingers through his hair.

Beyond her shoulders, at the top of a grassy crest where the trees opened, Gerald saw Silver Grenoble seated on her horse and staring at them with wide eyes.

CHAPTER X

Silver Grenoble's waking hours, since the day she had seen Corinne and Gerald together, had been filled with an apprehensiveness and sense of impending disaster, and her dreams were confused and tortured with visions of Roddy.

Preparations for the wedding of Paula and Jason stressed rather than relieved her sense of loneliness. Here were two, at least, who were going forward with their lives unaware of the defeat and hopelessness that were stalking about them.

After supper on the evening before the wedding day, Roddy and Jason were at work in the sitting room of the stone house on a wooden lattice which when decked with chokelberry and plum blossoms, would form a bower above the bride and groom for the ceremony.

Paula was watching the progress of Roddy's and Jason's work when Corinne entered in her green tweed riding habit.

"Hullo!" she called gaily. "What on earth are you making there, Roddy?"

Roddy looked down at her, then continued to pound a nail into place. "I think it's a canopy—or something like that," he said. "Or it will be when the flowers are up."

"Oh—I think that will be very nice!" Corinne exclaimed.

"You're back early," Roddy said. "Didn't the Richters give you a nice dinner party?"

Corinne seated herself. "It was all right. They had a lot of dull people up from town—rather tiresome."

Corinne pulled off her gauntlets. "I'm going to miss Paula terribly," she said, and made a sweet, dejected little moue at the big German girl, who was still standing with her red hands pressed nervously against the back of a chair.

A few moments later Roddy and Corinne left for the big house. As soon as they were outside, Corinne took his arm and drew herself close to him.

"I want you to do something for me, darling," she said in her sweetest manner. "I simply can't be at the wedding tomorrow. And I want you to explain it to the family. I know it sounds terrible to you, darling," she went on. "But Evelyn Richter told me tonight that Harrison's are having a big sale tomorrow in the city—just for one day. It's an awfully exclusive shop, you know, and I'll be saving money if I take advantage of the sale. I can stay over night at the Lombards' and it won't mean any extra expense."

"It'll cost you six dollars in gas to go there and back in the car—and more if you take the bus," Roddy said.

"Evelyn is going down first thing in the morning and she has promised to call for me and bring me back."

"But, Lord! How am I going to explain it to the folks? Paula will feel hurt no matter what I say to—"

"I'll speak to Paula tonight. I might fib a little, if necessary, and tell her I have to go to mother."

"Why not tell her the truth—if you have to tell her anything?"

"After all, Roddy, there's no need of hurting the girl's feelings any more than necessary."

"It seems to me you aren't giving much consideration to her feelings as it is."

Corinne drew away from him. "I have done far more for her than lots of women would for their maids. You seem to forget that I've suffered no end of embarrassment ever since I knew that Jason was going to marry her. Having a maid working for you every day—and knowing that she is going to marry one of the family—I've never said anything about it, but—"

"What's wrong with it?" Roddy demanded.

Corinne shrugged her shoulders.

"Well—I don't expect you to see it from my point of view, of course. After all, it's none of my business. What I think—or feel—doesn't seem to matter much anyhow."

Anger flamed suddenly within Roddy. He checked the retort that sprang to his lips. They had arrived before the door of the big house. He turned away abruptly and started for the barnyard.

"Aren't you coming in?" Corinne asked in surprise.

"I have some work to do first," he told her.

She paused with her hand on the door. "But—what shall I do about tomorrow? Evelyn is coming immediately after breakfast."

"Do whatever you like about it," he said. "I don't give a d—n!"

In the afternoon of the next day, Jason and Paula departed. It had been a fine wedding, Sophronia thought with a swelling heart, as fine as any farmer could afford these days.

Under the big oak a number of the farm boys had seated themselves and were tuning up on guitar, accordion, harmonica and violin. Presently a lively melody was lilting upward through the rugged branches of the trees.

"Come on, Phronie!" old Roderick called, his eyes wistfully following Silver and the older Michener boy as they exhibited an intricate and amusing fox-trot step.

"Oh, go on with you!" Phronie expostulated, blushing, and was forthwith swept into Roderick's old-fashioned and courtly embrace.

Twice, three times around the circle of the great oak's shade they waltzed, Old Roderick adapting his knowledge of dance figures resolutely and gallantly to the outlandish new tempo amidst cheers and clapping of hands.

At last, breathless and bridling rosy as a girl, Sophronia stopped in front of the door. Old Roderick bowed low over her hand, and the applause and laughter whirled about them.

"Go on with you, silly!" Sophronia said, and gave Roderick a little push. "I'm thinkin' the cider pitchers need fillin'."

In the kitchen she found Roddy alone.

"Why don't you go out and join in the fun?" she asked.

"I guess I'm not in the mood," he replied.

Phronie gave him a sharp glance. "Small wonder!" she remarked. "When do you expect Corinne back?"

"Tomorrow night," Roddy said, without looking around.

"Well—I don't understand what got into her to go off—"

"I'd rather not talk about it," Roddy interrupted.

"No—I suppose the least said about it the better," Phronie agreed. "I don't know what to think about it, but I wouldn't go moonin' about the house for anyone. I never did—and I never would. Why don't you get out and dance with the rest of them? No one will ever thank you for bein' a soft-hearted fool over any woman, even if she is your wife."

Roddy began impatiently rolling a cigarette. "A devil of a lot you know about it!" he exploded.

Phronie looked at him in surprise. "I know you've never talked like that to me in your life before," she said.

Roddy got to his feet and put an arm about her. "I don't mean it like that, ma," he said affectionately. "You know I don't. But there's more to this than I want to talk about. Now that Paula's gone I don't know how we're going to get along up at the house. I can't afford another girl, and Corinne doesn't know a darn thing about housework. Even if she did—she isn't strong enough to do it."

"Have you told Corinne about that?" Sophronia asked.

"Yes," he said darkly, "I told her."

"Well, there's no use borrowin' trouble. Corinne will swing into it when she knows she has to, like anyone else. I'll come up now and then to help her get started—and Silver will be glad to give a hand when it's needed. I don't know how I'd do without that girl."

Corinne did not return on the following afternoon. She telephoned Roddy to explain that she had not completed her shopping and that rather than drive home after dark, Evelyn Richter preferred to stay in town for the night. She herself would stay with the Lombards. And was the wedding a lot of fun, and how was he feeling? Roddy, listening to her tumbling, sweetly infected questions, and giving his monosyllabic replies, stared at the wall beside the telephone.

Even after he had hung up the receiver, he continued to stare at the same spot on the wall. There had been something in Corinne's voice—an over-emphasis of apology, of solicitude.

He went heavily upstairs to wash before going down to his father's house, with old Steve, for their early supper. He thought of the yellow corn he grew, rich and full-eared and sound as the sun. In times like these, when a farmer got little more than a romantic satisfaction out of what he grew, he was justified in contemplating with affection such corn as that. He hoped no obstacles of nature would come between the planting and the maturing of his crop.

GOLDEN TEXT—Beloved, imitate not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doeth good is of God: he that doeth evil hath not seen God.—III John 11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Letter From John.

JUNIOR TOPIC—With Ink and Pen. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making Our Church Friendly.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Friendly and Hospitable Church.

I. Personal History.

1. He was the son of Zebedee and brother of the apostle James (Matt. 4:21). The implication is that his father was in easy circumstances, for he had boats and hired servants (Mark 1:19, 20).

2. He was a disciple of John the Baptist (John 1:35-40). This was a most valuable training, for John was a man sent from God (John 1:6). The fiery eloquence of the Baptist no doubt profoundly impressed him.

3. He was called to follow Jesus (Matt. 4:21, 22). He was first called into the relationship of a disciple. As a disciple he came to know Jesus personally.

4. Appointed as an apostle (Matt. 10:2). Having been tested as a disciple, he now is appointed as an apostle (Mark 3:13-19; Luke 6:13-16).

II. His Character.

1. He was reserved. That is, he was decidedly reticent about himself. He speaks of himself as "the disciple whom Jesus loved" and "that other disciple."

2. He possessed a rare gift of penetrative insight. The truths set forth in his writings did not come as a result of reasoned judgment, but of penetrative insight. He was indeed a seer.

3. He was thoroughly masculine. Christian art does him a thorough injustice in portraying him as effeminate. He was intense, vehement in his temperament. He was truly a "son of thunder," as Christ declared (Mark 3:17).

III. Some Instances of Behavior.

1. Intolerance of irregular service (Luke 9:49, 50). There was a certain disciple who seems to have been intelligently witnessing and God had honored his testimony with power to cast out devils. John forbade him because he was not working with them.

2. His righteous indignation displayed (Luke 9:51-56). When Jesus had set his face toward Jerusalem some Samaritans refused to extend hospitality to him. This treatment of his Master so aroused the anger of John and James that they desired to call down fire from heaven to burn them up. This action grew out of John's great love for his Master.

3. John's care of Christ's mother (John 19:25-27). From the cross Jesus beheld his mother and committed her to the tender care of John. The intense love that he had for his Lord would move him to express the tenderest affection for his mother.

IV. His Third Epistle.

This is one of the three private Epistles of the New Testament and gives us a look into the early church life and also a picture of the aged apostle. This Epistle consists of the following parts:

1. The salutation (vv. 1-4). This letter was addressed to Gaius, with the fervent wish that his temporal prosperity and physical health would be measured by the measure of the increase of his spirituality. His supreme joy was to hear that his children were walking in the truth.

2. His praise for Gaius (vv. 5-8). This praise was for the hospitality which Gaius showed toward some traveling evangelists. In spite of the opposition of a certain prominent member of the church, Gaius received these preachers into his home. To receive God's messengers into our homes and send them forth on their journey is a deed worthy of God. One of the best ways to help the truth is to show hospitality to its messengers.

3. His condemnation of Diotrephes (vv. 9, 10). The sin of this man was his over-weening self-confidence and arrogance. He loved to have the place of pre-eminence; therefore, for that reason he refused to receive these traveling evangelists and expelled from the church those who had received them into their homes. He even maliciously attacked John the beloved pastor. His spirit of pride moved him to acts of tyranny toward others.

4. His commendation of Demetrius (v. 12). Demetrius was perhaps the bearer of this letter. John gives the assurance that Demetrius was of good report among all men. His life of good deeds proved that he was in fellowship with God.

Joys

We should publish our joys and conceal our griefs.

The worse the passage, the more welcome the port.

Joy and sorrow are next-door neighbors.

Joy which we cannot share with others is only half enjoyed.

Enthusiasm

To have true enthusiasm, we must have faith, assurance, hope, reliance and confidence in our own loyalty and ability.

Death to Poisonous Black Widow Spider

One of the most poisonous insects which troubles mankind is the Black Widow spider. While this insect is fairly easily identified by the hour-glass marking on the under side, oftentimes people have been bitten by it before they have had time to discover its dangerous character. The best plan is to regard all spiders with suspicion, and to destroy them as soon as they are discovered.

A reliable insect spray, containing an ample quantity of Pyrethrins, a product derived from Pyrethrum flowers, is not only sure death to spiders, including the dread Black Widow, but kills flies, mosquitoes and other insect pests.

In making up a product of this kind, it is important that ample Pyrethrins be included to give a complete killing effect. Unless sufficient Pyrethrins are contained in the mixture insects may be stunned and rendered groggy for a time, but recover from the effects of the spray.

IN MEMORIAM
KOLBER—David. In memory of our beloved husband and father who passed away four years ago, Sept.
25, 1931:

As we loved you so we miss you,
In our memory you are near;
Loved, remembered, long for always,

Bringing many a silent tear.
MRS. DAVID KOLBER AND SON LEON KOLBER.

Born September 14 to Mr. and Mrs. Kelly, at Milton, Wisconsin, an eight pound daughter. She has been named, Mable Lou.
The fall festival sponsored by the St. John Brotherhood, Wednesday evening was a very successful affair both socially and financially.
